

Sunlight beamed through the car windows, whilst also reflecting from the silver paint work on the Ford Escort. Stanley was travelling up North to visit his Auntie Susan, as his mother had to work during this school holidays.

Stanley's Auntie lived alone in the countryside with only her pampered pooch Paddy for company. At least Stanley had a little company and someone to play with whilst his Auntie Susan did the gardening.

Early next morning, Stanley looked outside. It was glorious outside. The sun shone through the colossal trees in the wooded area. The luscious, green grass stood to attention in the field surrounding the house, however a dark patch was peeping out of the trees. Stanley grew curious. He just had to know what was going on there!